Commentary

Veeva was the best performer, up +9.11%. At their investor day they set new medium-term targets, implying 13% revenue growth CAGR out to 2030. We note the stock is also being influenced by the announcements of the leadership of US health departments and agencies. UnitedHealth was second-best, up +8.10%. The company won the STAR lawsuit against CMS, which could improve its Medicare revenue in 2026. Additionally, the Trump election victory may also ease regulatory pressure in the managed-care industry. Mettler-Toledo was the worst performer, down -3.14%. Results were largely in line with consensus though China continues to be under pressure and biopharma customer activity showed mixed trends. Google was second-worst, down -1.26% after the DoJ submitted aggressive remedy proposals including: Chrome divestiture; data sharing; and ending search pre-installed deals.
